Short Description:	For Your Station to Localize: From To Kill a Mockingbird to A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, authors from all eras have pulled from their hometown experiences to create great literature.
Long Description:	From To Kill a Mockingbird to A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, authors from all eras have pulled from their hometown experiences to create great literature. Hosted by Meredith Vieira, this program explores how the hometowns of great authors have influenced their writing and their stories. Authors and Their Hometowns features interviews with local authors, librarians, and readers, and includes content from local stations across the country. This is the localizable version of this program; it is free of graphics, music, and text. Stations can easily incorporate voices from their communities with local, existing content, or by interviewing prominent local authors, librarians, book clubs, and readers of all ages. SPECIAL NOTE ABOUT MUSIC TRACKS: The music tracks provided with this localizable program (under Additional Assets: Audio) are restricted to the same rights outlined for the program to the right of the Main Asset preview player. The music tracks are to be used ONLY in association with this program and the derivative work your station creates (including changes to timing, raw footage, music, visual, and/or in-context promotional purposes). The tracks may not be used for any projects outside of this program and its related assets. It is understood that use of these tracks for other projects or programs would require a license from De Wolfe Music USA, Inc. For licensing, please call 212-259-0524 or email team@dewolfemusic.com.
